"We lived on farms, then we lived in cities, and now we're going to live on the internet!" – Sean Parker

This quote stood out to me because it shows how humans have changed over time—from living on farms, to cities, and now online. It's amazing how a few words can explain such a big shift. I relate to this because most people now spend much of their time on the internet—including me. I do almost everything online, studying, connecting and playing with friends. It shows how much our lives have shifted into the digital world. It makes me think about how fast things have changed. I'm excited about what the internet can do, but sometimes I also worry about how it affects real human connection. It makes me wonder what we're gaining and what we might be losing as we live more and more online.
